Celebrating Across Campus

Employee recognition was the theme across campus this past month as many celebratory events were held in honor of the outstanding efforts and service by our employees. We kicked things off on June 4 at the annual service awards dinner, where employees who have celebrated their 15, 20, 25, 30, 35 or 40 years of service in the past year are honored. Employees who celebrated 5 or 10 years of service were honored at a reception on June 20. On June 18, the Colgate and Hamilton community came together to show our appreciation for the many contributions made by David Hale, Vice President for Finance and Administration, and his family. A reception was held on June 21 to honor the accomplishments of Debra Townsend, Vice President for Communications. Both Dave and Debra have been instrumental in helping us reach our goals and we wish them the best of luck in their future endeavors. The festivities continued on June 25 during the annual Celebrate Summer picnic hosted by Human Resources. To all of our employees, thank you for the exceptional work you do and may you have a safe and relaxing summer.

“Menu for the Future”

This summer John Pumilio and Thad Mantaro are co-leading a course called “Menu for the Future.” A book-club style discussion group, the course is a continuation of the program offered last summer. Spread over six sessions, participants explore readings and ideas related to food culture in the United States, and the connection between food, diet and sustainability. Participants will learn more about the many cultural, social, and ecological implications of what we eat and discuss the importance of healthy eating habits.

These discussion courses, produced by the Northwest Earth Institute, feature articles by remarkable authors like Wendell Berry, Michael Pollan, Mark Bittman, Bill McKibben, Barbara Kingsolver, Eliot Coleman, Francis Moore Lappe…even Thich Nhat Hahn. With titles like “The SUV in the Pantry,” “Local or Organic? A False Choice,” “The Value of Diversity” and “Tangerine Meditation” there is much to consider and much to learn. The courses seek dialog not consensus and participants rotate through roles of facilitator and group member actively engaging with challenging considerations like the below quote from an article by Zoe Bradbury:

“Does one semi-truck delivering whole pallets of eggs from California have a smaller carbon footprint, or shall we say carbon foodprint, than 10 local farmers driving to town twice a week to deliver a couple of crates of eggs in their own pickups? And what kind of conditions do the chickens live in? Is it humane? What are they fed? Can I believe the label? What’s the most nutritious egg for my body? Is the healthiest one the most expensive one? Can I afford it?”

These many questions form the spark for the sustainability and nutrition dialog that is the course. While no clear answers are prescribed, suggestions for putting healthy practices into action accompany each chapter including ideas like paying attention to the considerations that influence our food choices, collaborating to form a food coop, and eating less processed food/eating lower on the food chain.

As we enter summer with a bounty of fresh local and organic produce available, we would like to remind colleagues of the wonderful asset we have in the local farmers’ market: consider expanding your menu to include more fresh fruits and vegetables from local sources. There’s great information about Colgate’s Community Garden here, and to learn more about local food be sure to see the online version of the Healing Arts Directory with information for nearly 40 local producers. Eat well and be well.

Get moving….crawl, walk or run!

In need of a break or just need some motivation? Not into strenuous exercise but just need to get moving? Join the newly formed noon time CU Walk for Wellness, as part of the CU Well program! The CU Walking Group will meet at the track at Dunlap Stands Monday – Friday. Bring a friend, come make new friends or enjoy some solitude with your iPod.

Crawl, walk or run-it doesn’t matter how you move, just get moving. Feeling brave? Climb the stadium steps! Come at noon. Running late or have limited time? Just come when you can and walk as long as your schedule permits. No more excuses!

Just 30 minutes of walking, at least 3 times a week can make a difference in your health. Walking has many benefits such as: burning calories, staying young, heart health, happiness, increased energy and so much more.

The first 25 participants will receive a free t-shirt!

We hope to see you there, and CU Well!

Sponsored by the Human Resources Department.
