Colgate’s Religious Communities and You

Nearly all of us have pondered the meaning of life, questioned how we should live our lives, and asked “are we alone;” “is there life after death?” Thoughts like these can lead one to seek or to question religion. Religious inquiry is something that most people share in common. If you are looking for answers, just curious, or want to enhance your current religious life, you might try attending some of the events and activities offered by Colgate’s religious communities.

Colgate has historic roots in the American Baptist Church and offers a religious life program that stresses the values of religious freedom and diversity. The major faith traditions represented at Colgate are: Christianity, Judaism, Islam, Buddhism, and Hinduism. Members of other faiths are active at Colgate as well.

University Church, the Newman Community, and the Colgate Jewish Union hold weekly services, and several of the other groups (including Muslims, Buddhists, Hindus, and the Colgate Christian Fellowship) gather weekly for prayer, meditation, and mutual support during the academic year. All of the religious communities at Colgate are engaged in the work of the Interfaith Council.

The garden level of Memorial Chapel is home to the offices of the Catholic chaplain Mark Shiner, Jewish chaplain, David Levy, Protestant chaplain, Mark Mann and the Muslim Student Association. All chaplains are available for counseling and assistance.

The activities of each group are open to everyone at Colgate, visitors are welcome. Some of the weekly activities, while classes are in session follow.

Colgate Safety Fair

The Campus Safety Department held its first annual Colgate Safety Fair on September 11 at the O’Connor Campus Center. The fair was held 5 p.m - 7 p.m. and campus safety cooked dinner for those in attendance.

Gary Bean, director of campus safety, stated that the Colgate Safety Fair was an idea brought to him by Officers K.C. Stewart and Deb DuBois who wanted to ensure that first-year students would “know the department and everything the department has to offer students.” To emphasize the importance of partnerships, some 14 different groups participated in the program, including the Office of the Dean of First Year Experience, the Wellness Initiative, Student Health Services, Student Affairs, Center for Career Services, Office of LGBTQ Initiatives, the Center for Outreach Volunteerism and Education (COVE), Greek-Letter Operations, Office of Counseling and Psychological Services, and the Sexual Health Awareness Group (SHAG).

The Southern Madison Ambulance Corps (SOMAC) had an information table along with an ambulance. The Campus Safety Department had several information tables set up as well; including: Fatal Vision, (alcohol impact on driving), fire safety and extinguisher training, campus parking information, defensive driving classes, crime prevention, personal safety tips, Operation Identification (engraving items), Colgate University Bike Identification Tag Program (CUBIT), and their E2Campus program (emergency notification system).

During the Safety Fair students completed a survey for a chance to win prizes. Prizes were donated by the Colgate University Bookstore, Adventure Bikes & Boards and Campus Safety.
