

Medieval and Renaissance Drama in England

SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

Before sending any printed copy prospective authors should first query the Editor by email with an essay title, the name of their institution, full contact information, and an abstract of roughly 100-150 words describing the content of the essay. The number of pages of the essay, including notes, bibliography, and illustrations should also be specified.

When the author is given permission to submit an essay, the author's name should not appear on the title page or elsewhere in the manuscript to ensure blind readings from referees. Referees expect to read manuscripts that conform to the Chicago Style Manual (latest edition). (Additionally, our publishers use Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary (11th edition), and The Riverside Shakespeare (2nd edition, 1996), ed. G. Blakemore Evans et al., for the purposes of copyediting.) The best way to ensure that the essay conforms to the correct form is to consult a recently-published volume of the journal.

Manuscripts should be DOUBLE SPACED in 12-point Time New Roman typeface, including abstract, text, quotations, endnotes (NO footnotes) using Arabic (not Roman) numerals, and bibliography. A bibliography of printed sources is required. Again, if in doubt as to format, consult a recent volume of the journal.

Manuscripts customarily do not exceed 45 pp.

Authors can expect to wait 3-4 months for a decision on their submissions.

The journal does not accept unsolicited review essays or book reviews.

SUBMISSION OF ACCEPTED MANUSCRIPTS

The Editor will contact authors of accepted manuscripts with readers' reports requiring any alterations in content or style issues.

Please note that authors must clear permissions to publish illustrations on their own. (The journal doesn't do this.) Also, illustrations must be sent for publication in the form that meets the publication standards of the journal's publisher. Authors should check with the Editor. Captions for illustrations should also be sent at the time of submission for publication.

After completing revisions, the author will send a final electronic file attachment, in Word, by the date agreed upon. Any delay in submission of copy or illustrations can result in delays in publication.
